In 1898 she united with the Christian church, in which she remained a consistent and devoted follower of her Lord, a helper in the church she loved, and only ceased activities after she became ill.

She bore her suffering with Christian fortitude and patient resignation, counting that these afflictions would be compensated for by the Lord she adored.

Miss Campbell had been in failing health for some time, having contracted bronchial pneumonia which caused her death.

She leaves to mourn her death three brothers, Ellsworth, Curt, Frank, all of Collins; one niece, Zela Ozmun of Des Moines; and three nephews Lloyd, Ralph and Ira Campbell, all of Collins. Two sisters and three brothers preceded her in death.
