Elevator Falls, Kills Woman At Haverhill

Mrs. Clarence Goodman was fatally injured at 9 a.m. Tuesday when a corn elevator fell on her at her farm home two miles west of Haverhill. Dr. Harold E. Sauer, coroner, ruled the death accidental.

Authorities said the Goodmans were moving the elevator from a temporary slat corn crib, which had been filled, to another crib location. Apparently Mrs. Goodman was either standing under the elevator or had walked under it when the machine collapsed.

APPARENTLY either the cable or the winch assembly failed and the elevator collapsed directly on top of Mrs. Goodman. Authorities said apparently no elevator parts were broken.

Dr. Sauer reported that she died instantly of a broken neck and other multiple fractures and injuries.

Mrs. Goodman was born Iva Marie Dodd at Collins Oct. 4, 1913, the daughter of John and Emma Halterman Dodd. Since her marriage March 2, 1932 at State Center to Mr. Goodman, they have resided in the Haverhill neighborhood.

SURVIVING ARE the widower, two daughters, Janet, 16, a senior in the Van Cleve High School; Susan, 5, and two sons, Pfc. Ronald Goodman of Fort Hood, Texas, and Pfc. Donald Goodman of Albuquerque, N. M.

Also surviving are eight brothers, Vernon and Roy Dodd, Des Moines; John, Lawrence and Milo, Collins; Amos, Baxter; Clarence, Wellsburg, and Dennis, Cedar Rapids.

The body is at the Avey Funeral Home pending the arrival of the sons.

MRS. GOODMAN was a member of Immaculate Conception Church at Haverhill, St. Monica Society and St. Theresa Study Club.
