The Nevada Representative
28 January 1903, page 5, column 3

Justice S. Richmond died at the residence of his daughter, Mrs. F. P. Youngblood, in Marshalltown, Januare (sic) 12, at the ripe age of eighty-seven. Mr. Richmond was a native of Schoharie county, N. Y.; lived in Illinois some years, during which period his wife died; came to Story county in 1868 and bought a large farm in Collins township on which he lived for a quarter of a century. The Willow Creek school house, the first one built in Collins township, was located on his farm.

This is an abstract, I got this a long time ago from somewhere that there was no photo copier, so it must have been Collins, I read through the old newspapers and wrote down the most important. It seems he lived in the Collins area about 30 years before moving to Rhodes, and then to his daughters home in Marshalltown. I remember there was a difference in dates, so I also found the obit in the TR but it wasn't much but clarified the date, I then checked Jan 12, 1903 on the computer calendar and found that it was indeed a Monday so knew I had the right date.

Justus S. Richmond, 87 died of pneumonia, Monday January 12, 1903 in Marshalltown at home of his daughter, Mrs. F.P. Youngblood. Born in Schlary, (Schoharie??) County NY, March 27, 1815, he moved with his family to LaSalle Co. IL. There his wife died, Dec. 22, 1863. He came to Story County, in 1868, buying a large farm where the Willow Creek Church stands. He gave land for the Willow Creek School, which was the first in the township. Survivors are: six daughters, and a son; Mrs. George Sheldon, David City, NE; Mrs. J.W. Shenkle, Collins; Mrs. E. Kelley, Manchester; Mrs. Jacob Day and Mrs. William Miller, Goldendale, WA; Mrs. Youngblood., Marshalltown; and Alonzo Richmond, Rhodes. Services from Rhodes ME Church with burial Eden Cemetery.
